

After years as a single parent, my son and his friend decided her dad and I should meet.... Obviously, we did....

Between full-time work, single parenting, supporting my son's school projects, and our church activities, I made time for another person in my life....and he came with daughters and (ultimately) LOTS of grandchildren. This worked out rather well since I had resurrected my sewing hobby. I am not the world's best seamstress but I have a lot of heart, prayers and thoughtfulness (along with love) that goes into my sewing. As you can see from the photo (above), we are a large blended family; no, this is NOT everyone but a majority of our children and grandchildren.

Getting ready for Christmas my thoughts were: EVERYONE needs a bathrobe; that's what I'll make! Selecting just the right print for each family member, according to their 'personality' made it easy to individualize the robes. Aprons are another passion and EVERYONE needs one. As you look through my website you will see sizes and patterns for all. Sports fan?no problem. (My family just doesn't happen to be but I attended Oregon State University and my son lives in Seattle, so.....)

But I don't just make bathrobes and aprons.... I've made:

Blankets: "Throws",

Memory quilts (photos on cotton (not plastic) fabric),

Pillows,

Dog Beds,

Appliques (by hand),

Check out the "Other Ideas" section of my webpage.

In the meantime, looking for that special personal gift for a sports fan, cook/baker/griller, dog, cat or child? Have an idea and don't see what you want? Send me an email. It doesn't hurt to ask; I'm always up for new ideas.